

Staying Autodesk license compliant:

(Please note that this is not an exhaustive list and you should refer to your Autodesk License Agreement for the full terms and conditions for license usage).

License Grant

When you purchase Autodesk software, you are in fact purchasing a license to use that software program. Prior to or on installation of Autodesk software programs, you must accept Autodesk's licensing terms applicable to that Autodesk software program ("Software License Agreement") which governs your use of that Software program. The Autodesk Software License Agreement contains restrictions on the use of that software program. Generally, you are not permitted to rent, loan, lease, sell, sublicense, or otherwise transfer the Autodesk software program to any other person without the prior written consent of Autodesk. Please consult the Software License Agreement for the particular software program you have licensed for the specific terms of use.

License Limitations

The Software License Agreement only allows use of the software program by you, the individual or legal entity who purchased the software program and who is registered with Autodesk as the user. The Software License Agreement does not allow third parties (including companies who are affiliated with you) to use the software program, without written permission from Autodesk. If you have questions, please contact us.

Geographical Coverage

For most Autodesk software programs, the Software License Agreement allows you to use the software program only in the country in which you purchased the software program unless (1) you purchased the software program in a member country of the European Union or European Free Trade Association, in which case use in any of those countries is allowed or (2) you have written permissions from Autodesk. For some Autodesk software programs, the territorial restrictions may be different. You should check the Software License Agreement and user documentation applicable to your Autodesk software program for the relevant territorial restrictions.

Additional installations

In the case of certain Autodesk software programs, if you have a "Stand-alone" or "Individual" license (i.e. a license purchased for installation and use on just one computer), the Software License Agreement may allow you to install one copy of the software on a second computer away from your usual work location, but always subject to the territory restrictions, and subject further to other conditions described in the Software License Agreement, including without limitation:

- the second computer cannot be a server and must be owned or leased by you, the registered holder of the license (generally the employer),

- the additional copy of the software must be used exclusively for work while away from the usual work location,
 - the additional copy may only be used by the same employee who uses the software at work,
 - the additional copy may not be used at the same time as the original copy. We recommend you check the Software License Agreement accompanying your Autodesk software program to check for this authorization and for the particular restrictions applicable. Additional special provisions for use of the software away from usual work location may further apply if your software is covered by Subscription. Please contact us for further details about these special provisions.

Educational Licenses

- According to the Software License Agreement accompanying Educational institutional versions of Autodesk software programs, those software programs may not be used for any commercial purposes, professional purposes, commercial training purposes or other for-profit purposes.
- According to the Software License Agreement accompanying Student versions of Autodesk software programs, Student versions may not be used for any training or commercial purposes, professional purposes, commercial training purposes or other for-profit purposes.
